The awards ceremony took place Friday, November 18 in New York City.

The Stevie Awards for Women in Business are the world's top honors for female entrepreneurs, executives, employees and the organizations they run. All individuals and organizations worldwide are eligible to submit nominations – public and private, for-profit and non-profit, large and small. The 2016 awards received entries from 31 nations and territories.

FuturePay, which launched in the summer of 2013 and was co-founded by current CEO Bobbi Leach, experienced impressive growth this year in numerous areas, including revenue, partnerships and employee count.

“As a female entrepreneur in the tech industry, I’d like to dedicate this award to every young woman out there who is considering a career in tech and business,” said Leach. “I’m so proud of the momentum our team has achieved in just three short years.”

More than 1,400 nominations from organizations of all sizes and in virtually every industry were submitted this year for consideration in more than 90 categories. Stevie Award winners were selected by more than 160 professionals worldwide who participated in the judging process this year.

“Each year we think the quality of achievements portrayed in Stevie-winning nominations couldn’t possibly get any better, and each year the amazing women who are recognized in this program prove us wrong,” said Michael Gallagher, Stevie Awards founder and president. “We are thrilled and humbled to be able to recognize so many outstanding women in the Stevie Awards for Women in Business, and to share the stories of their achievement with the world.”
